THE SIXTH ISSUE OF CONFEDERATE TREASURY NOTES

In spite of the Confederate government's desire to reduce the amount of Treasury notes in circulation, State Treasuries, banks, merchants, and the general public continued to need more paper money. This was the inevitable response to a vicious circle of rising inflation, fueled by the worsening effects of war. In May 1861, to purchase $1 worth of gold required $1.10 in Confederate currency, but by July 1863 this ratio had increased to $8, and by the end of 1863 to $20. Inflation since the start of the War had risen on average by 300%, with some staple products such as bacon, coffee, butter, and soap rising much higher than this, especially in the major cities which were absorbing refugees. During March and April 1863 riots broke out in Richmond, the Confederate capital city, with stores and warehouses being looted for food.

The reality was that the government could do little to slow down the printing presses which were churning out new paper money faster than ever, and this was clearly illustrated by the Act of March 23rd, 1863, which authorized the Sixth Issue of Treasury notes. Under this Act, notes in denominations of $5, $10, $20, $50, and $100 could be issued up to a maximum total value of $50,000,000 per month. In addition, a one-off total of $15,000,000 was approved for change notes in denominations of $2, $1, and, for the first time, 50cts. These notes would be dated April 6th, 1863. The painful defeats at Gettysburg and Vicksburg were still some months away when the Sixth Issue was formulated, but the economic and social demands of the War were already a matter of grave concern for the Confederate government. Thus, it was decided that Sixth Issue Treasury notes in denominations between $5 and $100 would only be payable "two years after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States of America". This was a significant change from the relatively recent Fifth Issue notes which were payable just six months after the ratification of a treaty of peace.

The standardized designs introduced with the Fifth Issue were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms. However, a new feature was the introduction of a stamp, in red ink, on denominations between $5 and $100, recording the month and year that each note had been issued. The reason for this was that Sixth Issue notes could be funded into 6% bonds if done within twelve months of the first day of the month stamped on the note. If not funded into bonds within the prescribed time limit, these notes were payable without interest two years after a treaty of peace. In reality, even if the Confederacy had survived, provisions were made in the 1864 Seventh Issue of Treasury notes which would have reduced the value of any Sixth Issue notes well below their face value. The Sixth Issue $2 and $1 notes were also modelled on the Fifth Issue equivalent, with plain backs. The new 50-cent note was produced by Archer & Daly in Richmond, Virginia, and was much smaller than other Confederate Treasury notes.

Some Sixth Issue records from the Treasury Note Bureau were lost or destroyed, perhaps during the War years, or perhaps afterwards when the surviving records of the Confederate Treasury were transported from Richmond, Virginia, to the offices of the United States Department of War in Washington D.C. Most importantly, all records relating to the April 1863 series were missing, along with sections of the November 1863 series for the $100 and $50 denominations; in addition, there were smaller omissions related to the $2 and $1 notes. Consequently, Thian was unable to include these missing items in his Register of the Confederate Debt, resulting in an estimated total of just over three million undocumented notes with a face value of around $64 million. However, through observation of thousands of surviving 1863 notes which can now be accessed online in various repositories, the Editor has so far been able to recreate around 11% of these missing records, and believes that over time this figure can be increased further as new notes come up for sale.

In summary, the Sixth Issue proved to be the largest of all seven Issues of Confederate Treasury notes in terms of both the financial value and the quantity of notes issued. The Treasury oversaw ten monthly issues of $50 million between April 1863 and January 1864, and $14 million in February 1864. Just under $4 million in the lower value change notes were also issued, giving a grand total of $518 million.

Although Keatinge & Ball handled all of the engraving work for the seven primary denominations involved - $100, $50, $20, $10, $5, $2, and $1 - the printing work was shared with several other companies. Whilst Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were given some work in the early part of the Sixth Issue, this was not sufficient to sustain them, and both companies would soon be forced to close down. Evans & Cogswell, an established publishing company from Charleston, South Carolina, had moved its substantial business to Columbia in late 1862, and quickly became the Treasury's preferred supplier for printing notes and bonds, dominating the Sixth and Seventh Issues. Remarkably, some of the $2 and $1 notes without a printer's imprint were produced by Hoyer & Ludwig in Richmond, Virginia, whose discount prices suited the Treasury for low priority work, despite the earlier contractual break down. Archer & Daly, located in Richmond, Virginia, were newly engaged to engrave and print the first ever fractional notes to be issued by the Treasury, with a denomination of 50 cents.

THE ENGRAVERS AND PRINTERS OF SIXTH ISSUE TREASURY NOTES

Hoyer & Ludwig played a minimal part in the Sixth Issue. The Richmond-based company had dominated the Second Issue in mid-1861 and had strong momentum going into the massive Third Issue, but ongoing concerns regarding the poor quality of its lithographed notes - which were widely counterfeited - began to damage its standing with the Treasury. However, the company triggered its own demise in April 1862 by refusing to comply with the Treasury's request to relocate to the safer environs of Columbia, South Carolina. Thus, Hoyer & Ludwig was coerced into selling its Treasury-related operations to J.T. Paterson, a Scottish dentist from Augusta, Georgia, who was keen to enter the engraving and printing business. Paterson quickly established his new company in Columbia and resumed work on the Third and Fourth Issue contracts that Hoyer & Ludwig had been engaged with. Despite this, Hoyer & Ludwig were awarded some work related to the Fifth and Sixth Issues; this involved printing some of the lower value $1 and $2 notes at a discount price, although the company was not allowed to include its imprint on any of the notes.

J.T. Paterson & Co. quickly established itself in Columbia and did a good job of completing the Third and Fourth Issue contracts that had been taken over from Hoyer & Ludwig. However, competition in Columbia was fierce at that time, particularly after the arrival of Evans & Cogswell, and Paterson struggled to secure a profitable niche for his new business. The company's role during the Fifth and Sixth Issues was limited to printing work, with Keatinge & Ball being awarded all of the prestigious engraving and high value printing work. This did not provide enough income to sustain the business profitably, and the Scotsman was forced to close his operation in Columbia in late 1863. With good foresight, Paterson had already established a second engraving and printing business in his home city of Augusta, Georgia, and this was able to undertake work for other clients, including the state Treasury departments of North Carolina, Alabama, and Mississippi, until the end of the War.

Blanton Duncan, a rumbunctious lawyer, businessman, and political activist from Louisville, Kentucky, established an engraving and printing business in Richmond, Virginia, during summer of 1861, confident that he would be able to secure lucrative contracts with the Confederate Treasury. Duncan had briefly served in the Confederate Army, raising the 1st Kentucky battalion with his own funds, but his ego could not cope with military discipline, and he quickly resigned. Duncan had no prior experience in the engraving and printing business but wasted no time in hiring people who did, although this was limited to lithography. Duncan produced four Third Issue notes representing almost six million notes, but his involvement in the Fourth Issue was limited to manufacturing the low denomination $2 and $1 notes. This should have been a straightforward assignment, but Duncan managed to make a mess of it, producing five different types of notes, instead of the two required. This left the Treasury even more determined to part ways with the troublesome Kentuckian as soon as practicable, and his role on the Fifth Issue was reduced to printing work on three of the denominations, and by the Sixth Issue this had reduced further to printing only a small quantity of $10 (T59) notes. This was clearly not enough to sustain the business profitably, and Duncan decided to cease operations, selling his equipment and releasing his staff to work for competitors. He angrily departed for Europe with his family, spending the rest of the War in London and Paris with other Confederate exiles.

Keatinge & Ball was originally founded as Leggett, Keatinge & Ball in Richmond, Virginia, during the late summer of 1861; two of the founders, Robert Leggett and Edward Keatinge had been lured away from the American Bank Note Company in New York, to produce paper money for the Confederate Treasury. The third founder, Thomas Ball was a businessman and a confidante of Treasury Secretary Memminger. The company had barely begun work on the Third Issue, when Leggett was accused of fraternizing with a suspected Northern spy, and was forced to resign, and the company promptly renamed Keatinge & Ball. Edward Keatinge, an Irishman, was a highly skilled engraver who produced first class work, engraved upon steel plates; his company quickly became the Treasury's most important supplier, relocating at the Treasury's request to Columbia, South Carolina in late April 1862. In total the company produced nine types of notes for the massive Third Issue, and one of the interest-bearing $100 notes from the much smaller Fourth Issue. However, the Fifth Issue clearly demonstrated Keatinge & Ball's position of dominance, when the company was given responsibility by the Treasury for engraving all seven of the denominations involved. The Fifth Issue represented a major step forward for the Treasury - the notes involved featured original designs, were engraved upon steel plates, had printed backs, and were generally printed upon good quality paper. These Fifth Issue designs would continue to provide the foundation for the Sixth (1863) and Seventh (1864) Issues providing a more consistent and familiar set of notes for the national currency. Keatinge & Ball also had sole responsibility for printing the higher value $100 and $50 Sixth Issue notes.

Evans & Cogswell evolved from a stationery and printing business which was originally established by John C. Walker in Charleston, South Carolina, in 1821. The business survived several financial crises, and after the death of the founder was taken over by his sons Joseph and John C. Walker Jr. By 1852 a diligent apprentice, Benjamin F. Evans, had become a partner and the company was renamed Walker & Evans, becoming one of the largest stationery and printing companies in the South. When John C. Walker Jr. died in 1860, his brother Joseph decided to step away from the company and focus on other business interests. Harvey Cogswell, another talented employee, was promoted, and the partnership of Evans and Cogswell was formed. During the early War years, the company undertook considerable printing work for the Confederate military, producing field manuals, surgical guides, and even bibles. The company did not possess any engraving expertise and thus was not able to assist the Confederate Treasury during the first few years of the War. However, once Keatinge & Ball had established itself and taken control of all engraving work, Evans and Cogswell's unrivalled scale and reputation as a printer became of interest to the Treasury, and the company moved its premises and equipment from Charleston to Columbia, South Carolina. With the addition of some skilled lithographers, the company was able to print vast quantities of bank notes with its seventy-five presses and staff of three hundred. It was soon pressed into action to assist on the Fifth Issue, printing $10 (T52) and $5 (T53) notes. Evans & Cogswell would go on to play an increasingly dominant role during the Sixth and Seventh Issues, thereby driving Duncan Blanton and J.T. Paterson out of business. Unlike many firms in the South who were ruined when the Civil War ended, Evans & Cogswell continued in business for another 125 years under the name of Walker, Evans & Cogswell (WECCO); facing bankruptcy, the company finally closed its doors in 1990.

Archer & Daly, was established in early 1862 in Richmond, Virginia. John Archer was a highly-skilled British engraver who had spent time working in Albany and New York before agreeing to relocate to Richmond, Virginia, to undertake work for both the Confederate Post Office, and the Confederate Treasury. Joseph Daly was Irish, an architect by trade, and his role in the business seems to have been purely administrative. Like Hoyer & Ludwig, Archer & Daly had also declined to relocate to Columbia, South Carolina, in April 1862; fortunately, the company's important relationship with the Confederate Post Office prevented any action being taken against them by the Treasury, for whom they were manufacturing bonds at that time. Given the smaller dimensions involved, and the low value of the 50-cent note, Archer & Daly was given the job of engraving and printing the Treasury's first ever fractional note, which appeared in the Sixth Issue.

THE SIGNERS OF SIXTH ISSUE TREASURY NOTES

Since the Second Issue in mid-1861, clerks had taken over the task of signing the ever-increasing quantities of Treasury notes being issued. This growing ensemble of clerks were assigned responsibility to sign specifically on behalf of either the Register, or the Treasurer, although there were occasionally inter-departmental transfers. Below are listed the 175 different signers that were involved in signing Sixth Issue Treasury notes, eighty-eight on behalf of the Register, and eighty-seven on behalf of the Treasurer. The quantity of notes that each signed for this Issue is also shown.

As mentioned previously, gaps exist in the Treasury records for the Sixth Issue, most notably the loss of all April 1863 data, resulting in the serial number runs and signers for more than three million notes being undocumented, more than 10% of the Sixth Issue total. Research to date by the Editor has reconstructed over three hundred thousand of these missing notes, and this figure will increase. Thian also noted that some 24,000 $10 (T59) notes were cancelled and unissued.

By the time of the Sixth Issue in mid-1863, most male clerks had been required to enlist in the Confederate military, and the Treasury had replaced them with female clerks, many of whom were in financial need, and dependent on the salary they received from the Treasury for their work. This transition is evident in the statistics for the Sixth Issue with almost two-thirds of the signers being females. Male clerks were paid more but were expected to sign around 3,500 notes each per day, compared to around 2,200 for a female clerk. At that time, it would have been considered inappropriate for the men and women clerks to have worked alongside each other, so the two groups were housed in separate areas of the Treasury building and worked independently of each other.

In summary, some 15,241,600 documented notes were signed by 56 female clerks for the Register, and 58 female clerks for the Treasurer. The remaining 10,160,717 notes were signed by 32 male clerks for the Register and 29 male clerks for the Treasurer. The details of some 2,640,720 notes remain unknown at this time, but the signers of these are highly likely to be amongst the list of those provided below.

There was an attempt to have the signers work in regular pairings, creating a pattern of signatures that would become familiar to citizens when notes were circulated. However, with the huge volume of notes involved in the Sixth Issue this practice was largely abandoned, and there was a total of 699 different pairings of signers compared to 98 for the Fifth Issue.

The signatures of Robert Tyler (Register) and Edward C. Elmore (Treasurer) appeared on more Sixth Issue notes - some 1,832,745 of them - than any other individual signers, but these were the 50-cent notes with pre-printed signatures, so it took no effort on their part. The most prolific hand-signers of this Issue were Mr. William Otis Slade, who signed 669,200 notes for the Register, and Mr. Franklin Haskell Link, who signed 616,800 notes for the Treasurer.

Engraved By	Keatinge & Ball, Columbia, S.C.

This $100 note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 56 (T56) was manufactured by Keatinge & Ball in Columbia, South Carolina. Keatinge & Ball had begun work for the Confederate Treasury in 1861, engraving and printing nine types of note which formed part of the massive Third Issue, and one type for the smaller Fourth Issue in early 1862. Edward Keatinge was a first-rate Irish engraver who had previously worked at the American Bank Note Company in New York and had the skills and experience to produce high quality engravings upon steel plates using the intaglio method; this set his company apart from its competitors at that time, as Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were only able to produce lithographic engravings. Keatinge & Ball's dominant position with the Treasury was evident from the Fifth Issue in late 1862, whereby the company was given responsibility to engrave all seven of the notes forming this Issue. These Fifth Issue designs were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms, and some variations in the coloring.

The upper left corner of the $100 (T56) note contained a multi-ringed circular counter inset with "C", and alongside this, the note's place of issue, being "Richmond". The upper right corner contained a larger counter with an ornate pattern, inset with "100", and to the left of this, the printed issue date of "6th April, 1863". Below these areas, plaque-shaped text boxes, one on either side, detailed part of the note's terms specifying that the note would be payable two years after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States. The note's central vignette was framed by the title - at the top "The CONFEDERATE", to the left "States of", and to the right "America". Below the central vignette, was the denomination in text form, being "ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS", and signature areas for the Register and the Treasurer. Serial numbers were stamped in red ink to the left and right of the central vignette. The month and year of issue was stamped in red ink along the right edge of the note.

For half a century after the War ended, it was assumed that the central vignette on the $100 (T56) note featured a portrait of Mrs. Varina Davis, the wife of Confederate President Jefferson Davis. However, a research paper published by H.D. Allen in the Numismatist journal of July 1918 provided compelling evidence that this assumption was wrong, and that the oval portrait featured Mrs. Lucy Holcombe Pickens, the wife of Francis Pickens, the Governor of South Carolina. (See footnotes). Along the left edge of the note was a large vignette featuring two Confederate soldiers - one standing, and one seated upon the ground, peering into the distance; perhaps the soldiers were on picket duty. On the lower right corner was an oval portrait of George Wythe Randolph, a Virginia blueblood with a remarkable life story, who served as Confederate Secretary of War at the time that the Fifth Issue notes were being designed. (See footnotes).

The reverse of the $100 (T56) notes had robust green ornamentation and design. A central star-shaped design included text stating that the note was fundable in stocks or bonds of the Confederate States, and that it was receivable for all dues except export duties. On either side of this central feature was a large, circular, green denomination marker with "100". Due to the note's high value, Keatinge & Ball were solely responsible for printing the $100 (56) notes, using good quality paper watermarked with "CSA" in horizontal block letters framed by a wavy line. Thian's "Register of The Confederate Debt" recorded a total of 1,930,160 in $100 (T56) notes issued between the months of April 1863 and January 1864, but subsequent research by numismatists has increased this figure to 1,950,400 notes.

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists three varieties of the $100 (T56) note, and assigns it a rarity rating of 3 (Very Common).

ii) Good quality lithographed counterfeits of the $100 (T56) have been discovered, although slightly smaller in size, and printed on plain paper as opposed to the watermarked paper used on genuine notes. This counterfeit was probably produced from the same plate as used to create the Fifth Issue $100 (T49) counterfeits. George Tremmel lists three varieties which can be researched in his book - "A Guide Book of Counterfeit Confederate Currency" published in 2007.

Biographical Footnotes:

Mrs. Lucy Holcombe Pickens (1832-1899), a native of Tennessee, was often referred to as the "Queen of the Confederacy" and was the embodiment of the stereotypical Southern woman. She had married Francis Pickens, a very wealthy lawyer and politician from South Carolina, who was twice her age. After a brief spell in Russia, where Francis was the US ambassador, the Pickens returned to South Carolina in late 1860 as secession took hold; Francis became Governor, and Lucy became a beacon of patriotism to the Confederate cause, helping wounded soldiers in hospital, selling her jewelry to raise money for local regiments, and sewing battle flags. The Holcombe legion was named in her honor. Mrs. Pickens was the only woman whose image appeared on Confederate currency.

George Wythe Randolph (1818-1867), was from an elite Virginia family, but his father's financial mismanagement brought the family to ruin. Aged just thirteen, George was enlisted into the U.S. Navy and served as a midshipman for eight years. Thereafter he attended the University of Virginia, graduating in law, and in 1840 joined the bar in Albemarle county. In 1850 Randolph moved to Richmond where worked as a lawyer, living a quiet life. John Brown's raid on Harpers Ferry in 1859 roused his secessionist sentiments, and Randolph organized an artillery company - the Richmond Howitzers. When the War began in 1861 he enlisted in the Confederate Army, serving as the Chief of Artillery under General Magruder, later rising to the rank of Brigadier General; he was actively engaged in the Confederate victory at the Battle of Big Bethel on June 10th, 1861. In March 1862, at the request of President Davis, Randolph was withdrawn from military service and appointed as the Confederate Secretary of War. Unfortunately, after just eight months in the role, Randall was forced to resign due to ill health, namely the worsening tuberculosis that he had contracted during his naval days. Randolph then did his best to serve on the Virginia State Senate, but in 1864, along with his family, travelled to Europe, in search of specialized medical treatment. After the War Randolph and his family returned to their estate in Charlottesville, Virginia, but he finally succumbed to his debilitating illness in April 1867.

Criswell Type	T-57	$50
Qty of Notes Issued		2,350,400
Value of Notes Issued		117,520,000

Dated	April 6th, 1863
Engraved By	Keatinge & Ball, Columbia, S.C.

This $50 note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 57 (T57) was manufactured by Keatinge & Ball in Columbia, South Carolina. Keatinge & Ball had begun work for the Confederate Treasury in 1861, engraving and printing nine types of note which formed part of the massive Third Issue, and one type for the smaller Fourth Issue in early 1862. Edward Keatinge was a first-rate Irish engraver who had previously worked at the American Bank Note Company in New York and had the skills and experience to produce high quality engravings upon steel plates using the intaglio method; this set his company apart from its competitors at that time, as Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were only able to produce lithographic engravings. Keatinge & Ball's dominant position with the Treasury was evident from the Fifth Issue in late 1862, whereby the company was given responsibility to engrave all seven of the notes forming this Issue. These Fifth Issue designs were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms, and some variations in the coloring.

The face of the $50 (T57) note had black and white coloring, with green ornamentation, and had a green printed back. The central vignette featured the bust of Confederate President Jefferson Davis, as engraved by Edward Keatinge (See footnotes). Serial numbers were stamped in red ink on either side of the central vignette, and below it was text stating the place of issue, being "Richmond", and the issue date of "April 6th, 1863". The upper left and right corners contained circular, counters with a background of linked oval-shaped designs, and inset a left-tilted "50"; above the left counter was "1st SERIES" which appeared on notes but had no significance due to the monthly structure of the Issue. On the inside of these counters were text areas which defined covering part of the note's terms, stating that payment would be made two years after the ratification of a peace treaty between the Confederate States and the United States. Between the two counters, in gothic-style font, was the title "The Confederate", and below the counters, placed around the central vignette, "STATES of AMERICA", and below this "FIFTY DOLLARS". This text was placed upon two blocks (one left and one right) of green overprint patterned with repeated "FIFTY 50" in small text. The month and year of issue was stamped in red ink along the right edge of the note.

Two green-shaded signature boxes, one for the Register and one for the Treasurer, formed the lower part of the note. A thin black and white border containing the repeated text "FIFTY 50" framed the note. Split along the far left and right edges, inside the border, was further text related to the terms - "FUNDABLE IN STOCKS OR BONDS OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA". The Keatinge & Ball imprint appeared at the center of the note's lower edge. This note was definitely produced in Columbia, South Carolina, although some notes contained" an imprint with "Richmond, Va." - this was a hangover from the earlier Third Issue $50 (T16) note.

The ornate green reverse contained a backdrop of four lattice-work panels, with a large green floral design placed in the center. A banner-style ribbon with text "THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA" adorned the central design, with circular green counters with "50" to the left and right of this. Due to the note's high value, Keatinge & Ball was solely responsible for printing the $50 (T57) notes, using good quality plain and watermarked paper. Thian's "Register of the Confederate Debt" recorded a total of 2,350,400 $50 (T57) notes issued between April 1863 and February 1864.

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists seventeen varieties of the $50 (T57) note, and assigns it a rarity rating of 2 (Highly Common).

ii) The $50 (T57) was the third of four $50 notes which honored the Confederate President, Jefferson Davis, by featuring his portrait as the central vignette. The others were the T16 (1861), the T50 (1862), and the T66 (1864).

iii) There are no known counterfeits of the $50 (T57) note. However, sheets of notes were occasionally stolen during the manufacturing process, and this led to forged notes with fake signatures and serial numbers. When these forgeries were discovered, they were removed from circulation by the Treasury, and the offending notes were often marked with a blue or red, rectangular stamp with the text "COUNTERFEIT". Further information can be found in George Tremmel's book - "A Guide Book of Counterfeit Confederate Currency" published in 2007.

iv) The $50 (T57) was printed on three different types of good quality paper:

- Plain
- Watermark with "CSA" in horizontal block letters framed by a wavy line
- Watermark with "Hodgkinson & Co. Wookey Hole Mill" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)

Biographical footnotes:

Jefferson F. Davis (1808-1889). was born in Fairview, Kentucky, but spent most of his childhood in Wilkinson County, Mississippi where his father established a large plantation. When he turned sixteen in 1824, Davis was entered into West Point Military Academy, where he graduated after four years of study, finishing twenty-third in his class. Lieutenant Davis later served with distinction in the Black Hawk Indian War (1832), before resigning his commission in 1835 to become a cotton planter on land near Vicksburg, Mississippi, which was gifted to him by his elder brother. Agricultural life did not suit him well, and he became increasingly involved in Democratic politics of the day; in 1845 Davis was elected to serve in the U.S. House of Representatives as congressman for Mississippi. With the outbreak of the Mexican-American War (1846-1848) he re-enlisted in the U.S. Army, serving with distinction as Colonel of the 1st Mississippi regiment. After the War Davis returned successfully to politics, serving in the U.S. Senate and as Secretary of War (1853-1857). Davis was a strong advocate of States' Rights, and one of the South's most experienced and respected politicians. Following the election of Republican President Abraham Lincoln, and the ensuing wave of Southern states seceding, Davis was unanimously elected as President of the Confederate States of America in February 1861, and despite his reluctance, served in this position for the next four years, overseeing the demise of the Southern independence movement. After the surrender of its armed forces, and the collapse of the Confederate government in May 1865, Davis attempted to flee to Mexico, but was captured near Irwinville, Georgia, and arrested for treason. He spent two years in military prison, before being released on bail in May 1867. All charges were eventually dropped. After his release, Davis spent time in Canada and Europe, regaining his health which had suffered whilst in prison. He later worked as President of an Insurance company in Tennessee, before retiring to Biloxi, Mississippi, where he wrote his memoirs - "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government" (published in 1880). Davis died in 1889 in New Orleans, Louisiana and was given "the largest funeral ever witnessed in the South". At his wife, Varina's request, Davis's remains were later interred in the Hollywood Cemetery, in Richmond, Virginia.

Criswell Type	T-58	$20
Qty of Notes Issued		4,428,000
Value of Notes Issued		88,560,000
Dated		April 6th, 1863
Engraved By		Keatinge & Ball, Columbia, S.C.

This $20 note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 58 (T58) was manufactured by Keatinge & Ball in Columbia, South Carolina. Keatinge & Ball had begun work for the Confederate Treasury in 1861, engraving and printing nine types of note which formed part of the massive Third Issue, and one type for the smaller Fourth Issue in early 1862. Edward Keatinge was a first-rate Irish engraver who had previously worked at the American Bank Note Company in New York and had the skills and experience to produce high quality engravings upon steel plates using the intaglio method; this set his company apart from its competitors at that time, as Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were only able to produce lithographic engravings. Keatinge & Ball's dominant position with the Treasury was evident from the Fifth Issue in late 1862, whereby the company was given responsibility to engrave all seven of the notes forming this Issue. These Fifth Issue designs were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms, and some variations in the coloring.

The face of the $20 (T58) was black and white, with an ornate blue reverse. Forming the left edge was a heavily-patterned rectangular block inset with vertical "TWENTY". On the upper right corner was a circular patterned counter inset with "XX". The central vignette depicted the Tennessee state capitol in Nashville (See footnotes).

Stacked underneath the central vignette were layers of text defining the note's title - "The CONFEDERATE STATES of AMERICA", the denomination being- "TWENTY DOLLARS", the place of issue, being "Richmond", and the date of issue being "April 6th, 1863". Placed along the upper edge of the note was a text banner stating that the note was "Fundable in Stocks or Bonds of the Confederate States", and arched below this text stating that the note was payable two years after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States. Along the lower edge sat another banner stating that the note was receivable in payment of all dues except export duties. The month and year of issue was stamped in red ink along the right edge of the note.

To the lower right is the bust of Alexander H. Stephens (1812-1883), Vice President of the Confederate States between 1861 and 1865. (See footnotes). Keatinge & Ball had featured a similar vignette of Alexander Stephens on the Third Issue $20 (T21) note. The note's ornate blue reverse contained a cluster of three overlapping circular panels, with "20", "XX" and "20" markings.

Keatinge & Ball was responsible solely for printing the higher value $100 (T56) and $50 (T57) notes, and had little, if any, capacity to print other notes. Consequently, the vast majority of $20 (T58) notes were printed by other companies, with good quality paper being used. Unfortunately, production of these $20 (T58) notes had to be suspended in October 1863, following a robbery at Evans & Cogswell's offices in Columbia (See footnotes). Thian's "Register of the Confederate Debt" recorded a total of 4,428,000 in $20 (T58) notes issued, between April 1863 and October 1863.

Quantity of Notes for this Series:	OCTOBER, 1863.	250,400

Quantity of Notes for this Criswell Type:	T-58	4,428,000

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists thirty-five varieties of the $20 (T58) note, and assigns it a rarity rating of 1 (Extremely Common). One variety relates to an apparent trial run with stamped serial numbers, which were used on the $100 and $50 notes, but this appears to have been quickly discontinued for the $20 note, perhaps because the process was too slow for the much higher quantities involved.

ii) George Tremmel reports that there were no known counterfeits of the $20 (T58). However, a large quantity of notes were stolen from the premises of Evans & Cogswell, and this led to forgeries with fake signatures and a fake red month stamp (JUNE. 1863).When these forgeries were discovered, they were removed from circulation by the Treasury, and the offending notes were marked with a blue, rectangular stamp with the text "COUNTERFEIT". Contemporary newspaper reports, and Treasury records on the incident, indicated that the theft had been an 'inside job', made possible by Evans & Cogswell's weak security. The Treasury ceased issuing $20 (T58) notes as a result of this incident.

iii) The central vignette on the $20 (T58) had originally been designed by a British engraver, George Dunn, at the time of the Fifth Issue in late 1862, and was adopted by Keatinge & Ball. It depicted the Tennessee state capitol in Nashville; the gardens were not completed until after the War, so Dunn had used his imagination in this regard. The impressive building, with its Greek revival architecture sits atop Capitol hill, the highest point in Nashville. The building was designed by architect William Strickland (1788-1855) from Philadelphia. Work began on July 4th, 1845, when the cornerstone was laid. The main construction project was eventually completed in 1859, at a cost over $900,000, and the building went into service. The unfortunate Strickland never saw the beauty of the finished building, as he had died five years before its completion. His body was however entombed in the northeast wall of the building. Ironically, Nashville had already been captured by Federal forces at the time this note was manufactured and issued.

iv) Two companies were involved in printing the $20 (T58) note - J.T. Paterson & Co., and Evans & Cogswell.

v) The $20 (T58) was printed on six different types of good quality paper:

- Plain
- Watermark with "CSA" in vertical block letters
- Watermark with "CSA" in horizontal block letters framed by a wavy line
- Watermark with "J. Whatman 1862" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)
- Watermark with "Hodgkinson & Co. Wookey Hole Mill" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)
- Pink (only one known example)

Biographical footnote:

Alexander Hamilton Stephens (1812-1883) was a native of Crawfordville, Georgia, and began his career there as a lawyer before entering politics in 1836. Stephens served in both houses of the Georgia legislature before serving in the U.S. House of Representatives between 1843 and 1859. Stephens was a strong advocate and defender of Southern culture and institutions, including slavery, but had not been an advocate of secession until after the election of Abraham Lincoln in November 1860. In February 1861 he was elected as Vice President of the Confederate States and served in this role for the duration of the War despite a dislike of President Davis and continued poor health. Stephens spent almost six months in Federal prison after the War, receiving a pardon in October 1865. Following his release, Stephens returned to manage his plantation in Taliaferro County, Georgia, but as soon as restrictions on former Confederate statesmen were lifted, he returned to politics, serving again in the House of Representatives from 1873-1882. He served briefly as Governor of Georgia before his death in 1883. Stephens continued to defend the legality of secession until he died.

Engraved By	Keatinge & Ball, Columbia, S.C.

This $10 note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 59 (T59) was manufactured by Keatinge & Ball in Columbia, South Carolina. Keatinge & Ball had begun work for the Confederate Treasury in 1861, engraving and printing nine types of note which formed part of the massive Third Issue, and one type for the smaller Fourth Issue in early 1862. Edward Keatinge was an Irish master engraver who had previously worked at the American Bank Note Company in New York and had the skills and experience to produce high quality engravings upon steel plates using the intaglio method; this set his company apart from its competitors at that time, as Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were only able to produce lithographic engravings. Keatinge & Ball's dominant position with the Treasury was evident from the Fifth Issue in late 1862, whereby the company was given responsibility to engrave all seven of the notes forming this Issue. These Fifth Issue designs were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms, and some variations in the coloring.

The $10 (T59) note had black coloring on the face, and an ornate blue design on the reverse. Forming the left edge was a heavily-patterned rectangular block inset with vertical "TEN". On the upper right corner was a circular counter, formed of layered rings, inset with "10". The central vignette was designed by George Dunn, the British engraver who was advising the Treasury at that time and depicted the depicted the proposed new South Carolina state capitol in Columbia. Construction had begun in 1855, but progress was slow during the Civil War and the emerging building was damaged by artillery fire during the Federal occupation of Columbia in February 1865. The building was eventually completed in 1875. Stacked underneath the central vignette were layers of text defining the note's title - "The CONFEDERATE STATES of AMERICA", the denomination being- "TEN DOLLARS", the place of issue, being "Richmond", and the date of issue being "April 6th, 1863", and finally, a numeric "10". Placed along the upper edge of the note was a text banner stating that the note was "Fundable in Stocks or Bonds of the Confederate States", and arched below this text stating that the note was payable two years after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States. Along the lower edge sat another banner stating that the note was receivable in payment of all dues except export duties. The Keatinge & Ball engraver's imprint appeared just above this. The month and year of issue was stamped in red ink along the right edge of the note.

On the lower right was a vignette featuring the bust of Robert M.T. Hunter who served as the Confederate Secretary of State from July 1861 until February 1862, after which date he became a member of the Confederate Senate (See footnotes). This vignette was also the work of George Dunn. The Treasury preferred his depiction of Hunter to the Keatinge & Ball version which had been used on three different Third Issue notes (T24, T25, and T26). The ornate blue reverse contained a backdrop of ten linked circular counters inset with "X", which together formed the shape of a large, elongated "X".

Keatinge & Ball was solely responsible for printing the higher value $100 (T56) and $50 (T57) notes, and had little, if any, capacity to print other notes. Consequently, the $10 (T59) notes were printed by other companies using good quality plain and watermarked paper (See footnotes). Thian's "Register of the Confederate Debt" recorded a total of 7,420,800 $10 (T59) notes issued between April 1863 and February 1864.

Quantity of Notes for this Series:	FEBRUARY, 1864. (Also in Italics)	553,600

Quantity of Notes for this Criswell Type:	T-59	7,418,400

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists forty-six varieties of the $10 (T59) note, many of which relate to Series, Plen errors, inverted backs, watermarks and printer's imprints. Fricke assigns the note a rarity rating of 1 (Extremely Common).

ii) George Tremmel stated that there were no known counterfeits of the $10 (T59). However, a quantity of notes were stolen, and this led to forgeries with fake signatures and serial numbers, and fake red month stamps from April or June 1863, or in some cases, had no month stamp. When these forgeries were discovered, they were removed from circulation by the Treasury, and the offending notes were marked with a blue or red, rectangular stamp with the text "COUNTERFEIT".

iii) Three separate companies were involved in printing the $10 (T59) note - Blanton Duncan, J.T. Paterson & Co., and Evans & Cogswell. These companies were all located in Columbia, South Carolina.

iv) The $10 (T59) was printed on six different types of good quality paper:

- Plain
- Watermark with "CSA" in vertical block letters
- Watermark with "CSA" in horizontal block letters framed by a wavy line
- Watermark with "J. Whatman 1862" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)
- Watermark with "Hodgkinson & Co. Wookey Hole Mill" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)
- Watermark with "J. Green & Son 1862" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)

The rarest watermark ever to be used on Confederate Treasury notes is that of "J. Green & Son 1862". Only a handful of examples are known to exist. John B. Green was a manufacturer of high quality paper used by artists, map makers and by Governments and Banks for financial instruments such as paper money and bond certificates. Green had acquired the Hayle Mill in Kent, England, in 1815 and established his business there; the family run business operated continuously until it closed its doors for the last time in 1987. Small quantities of Green's high quality paper seemingly made its way through the Federal naval blockade, into the Confederacy during the Civil War. The watermarked paper appears on a small number of Confederate Government Treasury notes (T59 $10) and also on Virginia State Treasury (October 1862, $10) notes of the same period.

Biographical Footnote:

Robert Mercer Taliaferro Hunter (1809-1887), was born at Hunter's Hill, in Essex County, Virginia and was a descendant of one of Virginia's wealthiest families. He graduated from the University of Virginia in 1829, and was admitted to the Virginia bar in 1830. He began working as a lawyer and planter, but was soon drawn to politics. He represented Essex County in the Virginia House of Delegates from 1834-1837, before being elected to represent Virginia in the United States House of Representatives, where he served until 1847. After this Hunter represented Virginia in the United States Senate for a further fourteen years, being a strong advocate of state's rights and slavery. He was expelled from the Senate in March 1861 due to his active support and involvement in the secessionist activities undertaken by various Southern states.

Following the establishment of the Confederate States, Hunter was appointed as the second Secretary of State for the Confederacy in July 1861, serving in this role until November 1862. Thereafter, he presided over the Confederate Senate until the collapse of the Government. Hunter was one of the group of senior Confederate ministers who had met with President Lincoln aboard the River Queen at Hampton Roads in February 1865, in a failed attempt to negotiate a peace treaty. He was arrested at the end of the War, spending several months in Fort Pulaski before being released on parole. He was pardoned for his part in the War in 1867, and returned to his farm in Virginia. In 1874, at the end of the Reconstruction era, Hunter stood for re-election to the United States Senate, but was unsuccessful. He settled for the role of Treasurer of the State of Virginia. He died in 1887 and was buried at his mother's (Garnett) family burial ground in Loretto, Essex County, in his native Virginia.

This $5 note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 60 (T60) was manufactured by Keatinge & Ball in Columbia, South Carolina. Keatinge & Ball had begun work for the Confederate Treasury in 1861, engraving and printing nine types of note which formed part of the massive Third Issue, and one type for the smaller Fourth Issue in early 1862. Edward Keatinge was an Irish master engraver who had previously worked at the American Bank Note Company in New York and had the skills and experience to produce high quality engravings upon steel plates using the intaglio method; this set his company apart from its competitors at that time, as Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were only able to produce lithographic engravings. Keatinge & Ball's dominant position with the Treasury was evident from the Fifth Issue in late 1862, whereby the company was given responsibility to engrave all seven of the notes forming this Issue. These Fifth Issue designs were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms, and some variations in the coloring.

The $5 (T60) note had black and white coloring on the face, and an ornate blue design on the reverse. Forming the left edge was a heavily-patterned rectangular block inset with vertical "FIVE". On the upper right corner was a circular counter with a pattern of overlapping ovals, inset with "5". The central vignette was designed by George Dunn, the British engraver who was advising the Treasury at that time and depicted the Virginia state capitol in Richmond (See footnotes).

On the lower right corner was an oval portrait of Christopher G. Memminger (1803-1888), a German immigrant who was orphaned in Charleston, South Carolina, but went on to become a successful lawyer and politician. With the formation of the Confederate States in early 1861, Memminger was appointed by President Davis as the Secretary of the Treasury, where he served until his resignation in July 1864. This vignette was also the work of George Dunn. Memminger preferred Dunn's depiction of him to the Keatinge & Ball version which had been used on four different Third Issue notes (T25, T26, T33, and T34).

Stacked underneath the central vignette were layers of text defining the note's title in gothic style - "The Confederate States of America", the denomination being- "FIVE DOLLARS", the place of issue, being "RICHMOND", and the date of issue being "April 6th, 1863", and finally, a numeric "5". Placed along the upper edge of the note was a text banner stating that the note was "Fundable in Stocks or Bonds of the Confederate States", and arched below this text stating that the note was payable two years after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States. Along the lower edge sat another banner stating that the note was receivable in payment of all dues except export duties. The Keatinge & Ball engraver's imprint appeared just above this, on the left side. The month and year of issue was stamped in red ink along the right edge of the note.

The ornate blue reverse contained a backdrop of five circular, patterned, counters inset with a large "5", placed on and around a large central "V". Keatinge & Ball was solely responsible for printing the higher value $100 (T56) and $50 (T57) notes, and had little, if any, capacity to print other notes. Consequently, these $5 (T60) notes were printed by other companies using good quality plain and watermarked paper (See footnotes). Thian's "Register of the Confederate Debt" recorded a total of 7,745,600 $5 (T60) notes issued.

Quantity of Notes for this Series:	FEBRUARY, 1864. (Also in Italics)	1,320,000

Quantity of Notes for this Criswell Type:	T-60	7,745,600

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists thirty-five varieties of the $5 (T60) note, many of which relate to Series, Plen errors, inverted backs, watermarks and printer's imprints. Fricke assigns the note a rarity rating of 1 (Extremely Common).

ii) George Tremmel reported that there were no known counterfeits of the $5 (T60). However, notes were occasionally stolen from the manufacturer's workshops, and this led to forgeries with fake signatures and serial numbers, and fake red month stamps from April or June 1863, or in some cases, had no month stamp. When these forgeries were discovered, they were removed from circulation by the Treasury, and the offending notes were marked with a blue or red, rectangular stamp with the text "COUNTERFEIT".

iii) The central vignette had originally been designed by a British engraver, George Dunn, at the time of the Fifth Issue in late 1862, and was adopted by Keatinge & Ball. It depicted the Virginia state capitol in Richmond. The building had been completed in 1792, hosting the first meeting of the Virginia Legislature in October of that year. It survived the Civil War unscathed, but in 1870 tragedy befell it when over-crowding lead to the collapse of a floor killing sixty-two people and injuring hundreds more. The building was repaired and further extended in 1904. It still stands today.

iv) Two companies were involved in printing the $5 (T60) note - J.T. Paterson & Co., and Evans & Cogswell.

v) The $5 (T60) note was printed on five different types of good quality paper:

- Plain
- Watermark with "CSA" in vertical block letters
- Watermark with "CSA" in horizontal block letters framed by a wavy line
- Watermark with "J. Whatman 1862" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)
- Watermark with "Hodgkinson & Co. Wookey Hole Mill" (very rare - from England, smuggled through the blockade)

Criswell Type	T-61	$2
Qty of Notes Issued		690,400
Value of Notes Issued		1,380,800
Dated	April 6th, 1863
Engraved By	Keatinge & Ball, Columbia, S.C.

This $2 note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 61 (T61) was manufactured by Keatinge & Ball in Columbia, South Carolina. Keatinge & Ball had begun work for the Confederate Treasury in 1861, engraving and printing nine types of note which formed part of the massive Third Issue, and one type for the smaller Fourth Issue in early 1862. Edward Keatinge was an Irish master engraver who had previously worked at the American Bank Note Company in New York and had the skills and experience to produce high quality engravings upon steel plates using the intaglio method; this set his company apart from its competitors at that time, as Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were only able to produce lithographic engravings. Keatinge & Ball's dominant position with the Treasury was evident from the Fifth Issue in late 1862, whereby the company was given responsibility to engrave all seven of the notes forming this Issue. These Fifth Issue designs were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms, and some variations in the coloring.

The $2 (T61) note was printed on pink paper, with black coloring on the face, and a plain reverse. Forming the left edge was a heavily-patterned rectangular block inset with vertical "TWO". Centered along the upper edge of the note was a design formed of repeating short and long black dashes, and below this a circular counter, patterned with an inner layer of adjoining ovals, inset with "2". To the left of the counter was text stating the note's place of issue, being "Richmond", and to the right, the printed issue date of "April 6th 1863". The note's serial number, hand-written in brown ink, appeared below the date field. Nestled around the base of the counter was further text stating that the note was payable six months after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States of America.

Stacked below the central counter was text stating the note's title - "The CONFEDERATE STATES of AMERICA", the denomination being- "TWO DOLLARS", and signature areas for Register (left) and for Treasurer (right). Along the lower edge sat another banner stating that the note was receivable in payment of all dues except export duties. The Keatinge & Ball engraver's imprint appeared just above this, in the center. Positioned in the upper and lower right corners was a patterned, plaque-shaped marker inset with "TWO". Set between these two markers was the note's only vignette, an oval portrait of Judah P. Benjamin (1811-1884), who at that time was the Confederate Secretary of State (See footnotes).

Keatinge & Ball was solely responsible for printing the higher value $100 (T56) and $50 (T57) notes, and had little, if any, capacity to print other notes. Consequently, the $2 (T61) notes were printed by other companies, including J.T. Paterson & Co. Pink paper was used in an attempt to deter counterfeiters, but this paper proved problematic and was disliked by the printers. Thian's "Register of the Confederate Debt" detailed a total of 675,200 $2 (T61) notes issued but acknowledged that an additional total of $33,120 in $1 and $2 notes was issued by the Treasury (See footnotes).

Quantity of Notes for this Series:	3rd SERIES. (No Series appears on note)	56,000

Quantity of Notes for this Criswell Type:	T-61	690,400

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists eleven varieties of the $2 (T61) note, and assigns it a rarity rating of 3 (Very Common). There are no known counterfeits of this note.

ii) Thian's Register of the Confederate Debt detailed a total of 675,200 $2 (T61) notes with a value of $1,350,400 (page 177), although he noted that an additional $33,120 was issued by the Treasury in $1 and $2 notes. Based on observation of surviving notes, the Editor believes that the final total of $2 (T61) notes was 690,400 with a value $1,380,800. The combined value of $1 and $2 notes with these adjustments subsequently reconciles to the higher figure of $3,023,520 reported by the Treasury. Thian referenced a small 3rd Series but this was in fact No Series, lithographed by Evans & Cogswell.

iii) The $2 (T61) notes were printed by Evans & Cogswell in Columbia, South Carolina, as evidenced by the company's imprint. Notes with no printer's imprint were actually printed by Hoyer & Ludwig in Richmond, Virginia.

iv) The pink paper supplied by the Treasury to print the Sixth Issue $2, $1, and 50-cent notes was left over from the Fifth Issue. Paper was in short supply at this time, and clearly the Treasury decided to use up the remaining of pink paper despite the fact that it had caused the printers constant problems - ink would often bleed when applied to the paper, causing many spoiled sheets. This problem persisted when Treasury clerks signed the notes - many surviving notes illustrate the bleeding and burning effect that the ink had on the pink paper.

Biographical footnotes:

Judah P. Benjamin (1811-1884), was the Confederate Secretary of State at the time of the Sixth Issue. Benjamin was born in London, but his family had emigrated to the West Indies, and then to the United States (Charleston, South Carolina) to seek better opportunities. He later settled in New Orleans, Louisiana, where he became a lawyer and member of the state legislature, before serving as United States Senator for Louisiana in Washington between 1853 and 1861. Benjamin was the first person of Jewish faith to hold such a senior position in government. After secession, Benjamin was appointed as Secretary of War in the Confederate cabinet, later being promoted to Secretary of State. Following the South's military defeat, and the collapse of the Confederate government, Benjamin fled back to England, where he established himself as a successful barrister until his death.

Engraved By	Keatinge & Ball, Columbia, S.C.

This $1 note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 62 (T62) was manufactured by Keatinge & Ball in Columbia, South Carolina. Keatinge & Ball had begun work for the Confederate Treasury in 1861, engraving and printing nine types of note which formed part of the massive Third Issue, and one type for the smaller Fourth Issue in early 1862. Edward Keatinge was an Irish master engraver who had previously worked at the American Bank Note Company in New York and had the skills and experience to produce high quality engravings upon steel plates using the intaglio method; this set his company apart from its competitors at that time, as Blanton Duncan and J.T. Paterson & Co. were only able to produce lithographic engravings. Keatinge & Ball's dominant position with the Treasury was evident from the Fifth Issue in late 1862, whereby the company was given responsibility to engrave all seven of the notes forming this Issue. These Fifth Issue designs were reused by the Treasury for the Sixth Issue, with Keatinge & Ball only making the necessary changes to the notes' date and terms, and some variations in the coloring.

The $1 (T62) note was printed on pink paper, with black coloring on the face, and a plain reverse. Forming both the left and right flanks of the note were heavily patterned rectangular blocks inset with vertical "ONE". Centered along the upper edge of the note was a design formed of repeating short and long black dashes. The upper central area housed the note's only vignette, a portrait of the Confederate States Senator, Clement Claiborne Clay, who was also involved in establishing the Confederate Secret Service (See footnotes).

Placed at the upper left side of the central vignette was text stating the note's place of issue, being "Richmond", and below this a small, patterned oval-shaped counter inset with "1". Placed at the upper right side of the central vignette was the printed issue date of "April 6th, 1863". and below this another small, patterned oval-shaped counter inset with "1". Nestled around the base of the counter was further text stating that the note was payable six months after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States of America. Stacked below the central vignette was text stating the note's title being "The CONFEDERATE STATES of AMERICA", the denomination being "ONE DOLLAR", and an area where the note's serial number was written in brown ink. Below this were signature areas for Register (left) and for Treasurer (right). Along the bottom edge of the note was another text banner stating that the note was receivable in payment of all dues except export duties. The Keatinge & Ball engraver's imprint appeared just above this, in the center.

Keatinge & Ball was solely responsible for printing the higher value $100 (T56) and $50 (T57) notes, and had little, if any, capacity to print other notes. Consequently, the $1 (T62) notes were printed by other companies. Thian's "Register of the Confederate Debt" detailed a total of 1,640,000 $1 (T62) notes issued but acknowledged that an additional total of $33,120 in $1 and $2 notes was issued by the Treasury (See footnotes).

Editor Comment - Thian recorded that an additional $33,120 was issued in Fifth Issue 2s and 1s. The Editor estimates a total of $2,720 (2,720 notes) was in 1s.

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists twenty-four varieties of the $1 (T62) note, and assigns it a rarity rating of 2 (Highly Common). There are no known counterfeits of this note.

ii) Thian's Register of the Confederate Debt detailed a total of 1,640,000 $2 notes with a value of $1,640,000 (page 177), although he noted that an additional $33,120 was issued by the Treasury in $1 and $2 notes. Based on observation of surviving notes, the Editor believes that the final total of $1 notes was 1,642,720 with a value $1,642,720. The combined value of $1 and $2 notes with these adjustments then reconciles to the higher figure of $3,023,520 reported by the Treasury. Thian referenced a small 3rd Series but this was in fact No Series, lithographed by Evans & Cogswell.

iii) The $1 (T62) notes were printed by Evans & Cogswell in Columbia, South Carolina, as evidenced by the company's imprint. Notes with no printer's imprint were actually printed by Hoyer & Ludwig in Richmond, Virginia.

iv) The pink paper supplied by the Treasury to print some of the Sixth Issue $2, $1, and 50-cent notes was left over from the Fifth Issue. Paper was in short supply at this time, and clearly the Treasury decided to use up the remaining of pink paper despite the fact that it had caused the printers constant problems - ink would often bleed when applied to the paper, causing many spoiled sheets. This problem persisted when Treasury clerks signed the notes - many surviving notes illustrate the bleeding and burning effect that the ink had on the pink paper.

Biographical footnotes:

Clement Claiborne Clay (1811-1884), came from a prominent family of Alabama planters, businessmen and politicians. He attended the University of Alabama, graduating in 1834, after which he worked for his father who at that time was the Governor of Alabama. Clay later attended the University of Virginia where he graduated in law in 1839 and was admitted to the Alabama Bar. During the 1840s he worked for the family law firm, also serving as a judge in Madison County, and between 1846 and 1848 as a member of the Alabama State House of Representatives. Clay stood in the 1850 election to represent Alabama in the United States House of Representatives but was defeated. However, in 1853 he was elected by the Alabama legislature to serve in the United States Senate and was re-elected in 1857. As with most Southern Democrats, Clay was a strong advocate of state's rights, and after Alabama's secession in January 1861, he was amongst a group of senators who resigned their seats in the Senate.
When the First Confederate Congress was established in early 1862, Clay was elected as Senator for Alabama, and served in this position for two years, remaining a strong supporter of President Davis during this time.

In May 1864, Clay's career took an interesting turn when he was chosen by President Davis to help establish a network of secret agents who would undertake espionage and other nefarious activities on behalf of the Confederacy. Clay directed his operations from the relative safety of Ontario, Canada, gaining notoriety for the surprise raid on the town of St. Albans, Vermont, in which Confederate agents stole over $200,000 from three banks, before fleeing across the border into Canada. Various other subversive acts, including the attempted hijacking of a steamship, on Lake Michigan led to a reward of $25,000 being placed upon Clay's head, but he managed to avoid arrest until the War ended. After surrendering to Federal forces in Macon, Georgia, he was imprisoned in Fort Monroe and immediately came under suspicion for being involved in planning the assassination of President Lincoln. Nothing was proven, and Clay was eventually released in 1867, although his health had been damaged by the experience. He returned to Alabama, practicing law in Huntsville, and later entering the insurance business in an attempt to earn a good living, but worsening health problems made this difficult and he was plagued by debt until his death in 1884. He was buried at the Maple Hill Cemetery in Huntsville.

Criswell Type	T-63	50cts

Dated	April 6th, 1863
Engraved By	Archer & Daly, Richmond, VA

This 50-cent note, classified by Grover Criswell as Type 63 (T63) was engraved and printed by Archer & Daly, in Richmond, Virginia. John Archer was a highly-skilled British engraver who had spent time working in Albany and New York before relocating to Richmond, Virginia, to undertake work for both the Confederate Post Office, and the Confederate Treasury. Joseph Daly was Irish, an architect by trade, and his role in the business seems to have been purely administrative. Like Hoyer & Ludwig, Archer & Daly had also declined to relocate to Columbia, South Carolina, in April 1862; fortunately, the company's important relationship with the Confederate Post Office prevented any action being taken against them by the Treasury, for whom they were manufacturing bonds at that time. Given the smaller dimensions involved, and the low value of the 50-cent note, Archer & Daly was given the job of producing the Treasury's first ever fractional note. Given rapidly rising inflation at that time, it is questionable why the Treasury even bothered to produce a note of such low value as part of the Sixth Issue.

Despite its low value, the 50-cent (T63) note was well designed, being engraved on steel by either John Archer himself, or John Halpin, another British engraver who was working at the company. The central vignette contained the bust of Confederate President Jefferson Davis, using the same engraving that appeared on the 1863 "10-cent Blue Jefferson Davis" postage stamp produced by Archer & Daly, of which some forty-seven million were issued. On either side of the vignette was a patterned oval-shaped counter, wrapped by a laurel wreath. The counter to the left was inset with "FIFTY 50 CENTS", and on the right with "The Confederate 50 States of America" in micro text.

Flanking the upper part of the central vignette was text, to the left stating the place of issue, being "Richmond", and to the right, the date of issue being "April 6th 1863". Stacked beneath the central vignette were layers of text defining the note's title - "The Confederate States of America", and the denomination being- "FIFTY CENTS", and finally, a "CS" design. Along the left edge of the note was text stating that the note was payable six months after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States. Along the right edge was text which did not appear on any other Sixth Issue note, stating that the note had been "Issued by authorization of Congress under the Act of March 23, 1863". On the inside of this text was the imprint "Archer & Daly, Richmond, Va."

Serial numbers were added later, being machine-stamped in red ink at the Treasury offices in Columbia, South Carolina. The lower edge of the note contained preprinted, facsimile signatures of Robert Tyler as the Register, and Edward C. Elmore as the Treasurer. The 50cts note was the only Confederate Treasury note to contain such printed signatures - despite the obvious cost benefits, the Confederate Congress refused to dispense with the hundreds of clerks who were employed to sign Treasury notes and bonds.

The 50-cent (T63) notes were printed on pink paper, which was left over from the Fifth Issue. Paper was in short supply at this time, and clearly the Treasury decided to use up the remaining of pink paper despite the fact that it had caused the printers constant problems - ink would often bleed when applied to the paper, causing many spoiled sheets. This problem persisted when Treasury clerks signed the notes - many surviving notes illustrate the bleeding and burning effect that the ink had on the pink paper. Archer & Daly are known to have experienced the same problem with this paper, and this led to delays and issues with the Treasury. Thian's Register of the Confederate Debt recorded that 1,831,517 50-Cent (T63) notes were issued.

Quantity of Notes for this Series:	2nd Series	485,729

Quantity of Notes for this Criswell Type:	T-63	1,831,517

Footnotes for this Criswell Type:

i) In his 2014 book, "Collecting Confederate Paper Money", Pierre Fricke lists thirteen varieties of the $1 (T62) note, some related to flourishes and rare examples with double serial number imprints, and assigns it a rarity rating of 2 (Highly Common). There are no known counterfeits of this note.

ii) Apart from being the lowest denomination of all notes issued by the Confederate Treasury, the 50-cent notes (T63 and T72) were also physically the smallest. They were 4.33in x 2.36in (11cm x 6cm) in size, which was typical for these kinds of fractional notes, popularly referred to as shinplasters.

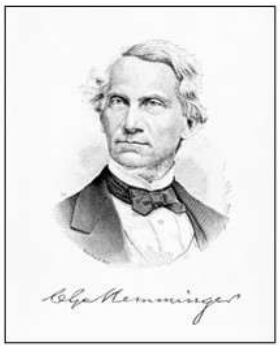

iii) Thian's summary of the 50cts (T63) financials (on page 177 of the Register) contained a number of compounded errors, although he correctly stated the total value for this denomination as being $915,758.50.

in the 50c section of the page Thian's calculation of the 2nd Series amount is incorrect, probably a printer error. His version and the corrected one are shown below:

- A to I, 2d Series : 1-53485 (est.) = $240,068.50 [Thian - Incorrect]

- A to I, 2d Series : 1-53485 (est.) = $240,682.50 [Editor - Corrected]

Further down the page this led Thian to incorrectly calculate the financial difference between the Treasury's recorded total value for this denomination ($915,758.50) and Thian's estimate ($912,962.50) as being $2,796.00. The correct difference should be $2,182.00, which represents an additional 4,364 notes; the Editor has appended these to the 2nd Series, resulting in an extended serial number range of 1-53970.
